This game is like casual arcade racer, but from the dolphin's point of view. You have to avoid various obstacles on your way to the finish line. What's more, as you get farther from the start line, you will go into reverse, so you have to reach the finish line from behind to score. The further you go, the more difficult the obstacles you need to avoid. For each level you can play, you can earn coins, and you can spend them to purchase bonuses (such as different skins for your dolphin). Each level has different number of obstacles to complete, but you can use them in every level. The more obstacles you use, the longer you'll be able to swim around. Eternity Falls - EscapeThe first person "tower defense" game. You play as a little demon trying to escape from the tower. Every time you find a weapon, you can summon it and then try to kill the little angels that are trying to catch you. You can increase the power of your weapon by purchasing it with your coins. You will also have to collect bombs scattered throughout the levels to increase the range of your weapon, to defend yourself from the bigger and tougher angels. Over the Top - Complete the level as fast as possible A classic "shooter" with the addition of traps and traps. You will have to find weapons, break traps and complete your level. After you complete the level, you can use your weapon to kill the remaining enemies. At the end of each level, you'll see the time you took to complete it. You can compare your time with the time of other players and players around the world! This time will be included in your global leaderboard. Discovery Flight - Defeat all the monsters A puzzle game where you have to maneuver your way through the level to get the monsters to retreat back to their spawning point. You can use any of your weapon to defeat them, or you can also use their minions to destroy them for you. You will need to complete the level with the least amount of time to collect as many "reflex points" as possible. You can spend your coins to increase your reflexes at the end of each level. Dive to collect coins and jewels on your way to the top to unlock new, better looking creatures. Levels are divided into a series of vertical "dives" with a number of "pillars" you need to traverse in order to reach the exit at the top of the level. You have to avoid enemies, traps and collect coins and gems and Ooze Fuse and Ooze is a role-playing game adventure and sourcebook for the Forgotten Realms setting, written by Monte Cook and published in 2000. Fuse and Ooze includes 47 new spells for the game's wizard class, as well as new feats, items, monster statblocks, and other additions to the game. Publication history The 2000 game is the second edition of Fuse and Ooze (1998), which was the first edition released. Creation and play Logan Bonner "released more than 10" adventures from the game at Gen Con. Though the game is designed for both 1st and 2nd Edition rules (including 1st edition rules for races, classes, and monsters that are in the 2nd edition book, as well as 2nd edition spells), all of the published adventures work in the 1st edition rules. Story In Fuse and Ooze, as in many adventures, a great legend was found in the great underground caverns of the Land of Chaos. Its gruesome details terrified the self-appointed archivist of the caverns, who was cursed with deafness so that he had never heard of this dreadful occurrence. Meanwhile, the mages Alina, Tetch, and Tarna led a voluntary expedition there. The goal of the expedition was not initially strictly vindictive; the ancient magic inherent in the chamber, and in the broken and bent stone around the chamber, was very hopeful, and would continue to provide spells to any mages who could learn them. Once the expedition came across the truly hideous skeleton residue, however, which could not be missed, it became a matter of vengeance, though it would obviously be best to learn as many spells as could be safely had.

Introduction The Journeyman Monks were a group of mercenaries who had traveled from a remote land of the South of the Flanaess (Moander) in service to a man of wealth named Johannes Molten. Their leader was a man who thought only of gold, and they had done his bidding for years. There was talk of a "larger journey", a vaster task which could be the vehicle for a particularly long journey. Now in summer of 1983, the local Chief of the Moander, Wulfgar, had called a council at the walled town of Berwyn. At the same time, in a hidden location high in the walls of Berwyn, a less than trustworthy priest assisted the Journeymen on their most
