Its monumental Gothic Revival facade with four 330-foot-high towers represented the highest point in the kingdom. The park and its gardens were finished only in 1923, the year of the first flight in Germany. Much of the park was destroyed in the World War II bombing of Berlin. Today The palace is still privately owned and has limited public access. The building is also no longer open to the public. Only a few rooms are accessible to the public. An ice skater's rink has also been installed at the palace. She made the admission this morning as she opened a new world-leading centre for nuclear security in North Yorkshire. But the Scottish National Party (SNP) MSP for Glasgow North West has responded by saying: "This is not the first time the UK's nuclear weapons programme has been revealed as a complete fraud." Ms Lamont said the £10.7 billion process of refurbishing four ageing Trident-class Vanguard missiles at the Faslane naval base had been put on hold. She said: "A major disruption is underway at Faslane with the knock-on effects likely to hit the livelihoods of the families of local people. "The SNP has warned for some time that Trident would ultimately prove a burden on Scottish taxpayers and we welcome this recognition from the UK government." Mr Lamont said the SNP had been pressing ahead with plans to seek a judicial review on the protection of Scottish interests in the activities of the Trident programme.
